Combining Modern Art and Architecture in the 21st Century

A case study of collaboration by Victoria Lyon of Victoria Lyon Interiors and a group of artisans, artists and furniture makers on bringing an empty Philip Johnson House back to life will be presented by Ms. Lyon.

Victoria Lyon is a true Renaissance woman with talent and experience in fields ranging from art and design to business and science. Victoria's interest in the fine and decorative arts came from a family intimately involved with the worlds of antiques, art, architecture and real estate. These interests were heightened during many extended travels abroad, as well as during her studies of fine art at Smith College.

Victoria joined Polaroid Corporation in 1976 where she became chief photographer and project director for the famous Room Size Camera, which produced extraordinary life-sized art reproductions. She used this technology to develop numerous exhibitions and documentary projects at institutions such as the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Prado in Madrid, Spain, and the Vatican Museums in Rome. Later she became director of marketing, sales and public relations for the Polaroid Museum Replica business, introducing the reproduction to museum retailers and into the residential and contract furnishings markets.

Victoria's forte' is her ability to move fluidly between stylistic genres. She is equally at home creating a tailored transitional environment or a bright, edgy contemporary design, as seen in her showcase of the Philip Johnson Modern. Her fluency in the language of many different styles enables her to confidently construct many varied and unique living environments, which reflect the personal tastes and style of their occupants.
